A Wisconsin resident for the past 33 years, Susan, 51, was executive vice president for strategy with Rogers Behavioral Health System, Inc., in the Milwaukee area before becoming DSHS Secretary May 18, 2009. Prior to joining Rogers in 2007, Susan served for five years as senior vice president and chief operating officer of the National Alliance for Children and Families and Families International. With the Alliance, Susan consulted with nonprofit human service agencies across the country on a range of governance, organizational and program areas, including child welfare practice, system design and management, contracting, policy, and state and federal financing.

In 1996, Susan was appointed administrator of the Division of Children and Family Services within the Wisconsin Department of Health and Family Services. For nearly seven years she led this office responsible for child welfare, regulation and licensing of child care facilities, youth development and other community programs. In this role, Susan successfully led the state's assumption of all child welfare responsibilities from Milwaukee County. She also championed a major redesign of physical and behavioral health services for children in out-of-home care provided by Medicaid.

"Throughout my career, I have been committed to improving the lives of vulnerable children and adults and their families," Susan says. "Washington is known as an innovative state, and this is the time to look for opportunities to be more efficient and effective."

Susan is married with three adult children. She earned a bachelor's degree in business administration from the University of Wisconsin - Green Bay and attended the Program for Senior Executives in State and Local Government at Harvard University's John F. Kennedy School of Government.
